The Detroit Autorama brings the latest automotive technologies and generous amounts of glamor to the Cobo Center every winter, right around the time when Midwest locals become stir crazy for spring. This year's show did not disappoint, and it gave us the car fix we needed to make it through until driving season. Everything from traditional hot rods to pro-street builds with heavily polished engines and high-power claims scattered the showroom floor. Hundreds of vehicles were on display, but no one has time to read about every single one. Instead, we narrowed it down to eight of our favorites.

6. When Two Worlds Collide

This non-biased Ford Model A represents the best of both worlds. Its frame was stretched by 7 inches for an optimal 110-inch wheelbase, which better balances the heavy 461 cid Chevy engine. Mounted atop the big-block is a hefty 8-71 series Weiand blower and Sanderson Zoomie headers. The color-matched valve covers and the '34 Chevy grill and dash blend the marvelous mash up to perfection.
